Security while working online

Issues

- ✦ The uptake in working online has been an immense surge due to the pandemic
- ✦ Privacy
- ✦ Zoombombing
- ✦ Hacking into recordings
- ✦ Scamming
- ✦ Competing platforms and the way this plays into security
- ✦ How do we really know as teachers that just want to get on with the job?

Zoom is still safe to use in most cases

Does all this mean that Zoom is unsafe to use? No.

Unless you're discussing state or corporate secrets, or disclosing personal health information to a patient, Zoom should be fine to use. Just ask that meeting participants sign in with a password.

For school classes, after-work get-togethers, or even workplace meetings that stick to routine business, there's not much risk in using Zoom. Kids will probably continue to flock to it, as they can even use Snapchat filters on Zoom.

You just need to be aware that the Zoom software creates a huge "attack surface," as security professionals like to say, and that hackers are going to try to come at it every way they can. They're already registering lots of Zoom-related phony domains and developing Zoom-themed malware.

The upside is that if lots of flaws in Zoom are found now and fixed soon, then Zoom will be the better -- and safer -- for it.
